Hold a piece of history in your hand

As 2023 comes to a close, I would once again like to wish everyone all the very best for 2024 and to thank my wonderful staff who get as enthralled about antiques as much as I do. For those who don't know, when we expanded our store last year, we put in a state-of-the-art watchmaking and polishing workshop that allows us to service not just our wrist and pocket watches, but yours too - all instore. Along with this, we have been appointed an official Omega watch service centre.

Along with the bigger premises, we have been able to set aside two display windows to have on show some of the wonderful antiques and very special pieces that we have procured over the years. These are items that are not for sale, but are now on permanent display in the store for you to look at, and a few of these are shown on pages 54 and 55.

I hope you enjoy looking through this year's catalogue. It has some truly wonderful pieces, such as my personal favourites: the enamel aquamarine and pearl necklace on page 24, and the sapphire and diamond ring on page 14 that was handmade by our Master Jeweller in our own 18 carat Kalmar Yellowrose gold.

Once again, I would like to wish everyone a safe and happy 2024 and I look forward to seeing you in the store, or if you can't make it in, please view our lovely items on our website at www.kalmarantiques.com.au

Kind regards, Marlene Kalmar.

Imperial Half Pint Measuring Cup by James Blanch

This measuring cup is a rare piece of Australian convict history. The item was made by English born convict, James Blanch, after receiving his Ticket of Leave in 1821. Before his conviction, he was apprenticed in the trade of mathematical instrument making and this former training prompted him to establish the Sydney Foundry and Engineering Works following his release. The infant colony of New South Wales moved to develop a uniformed approach to measurement and weight based upon the imperial system of England. The provision of these items was awarded to James Blanch with the task of creating seven sets of instruments accurately determining weights, volume measurements and a standard yard. The seven sets were distributed to police offices in various regional towns including Parramatta, Windsor, Bong-Bong, Goulburn, Bathurst, Maitland and Sydney. These instrument sets would be the foundations of accurate and cohesive measurement units across the colony of New South Wales. Interesting markings on the cup included the maker's mark 'J. Blanch' and the broad arrow. The broad arrow was widely used to mark objects used by convicts, that it became associated with the convict system itself, rather than just a symbol of government property. However, due to Blanch's status as a free member of society a distinction can be made that this mark was associated with the sets belonging to government property as opposed to being included due to Blanch's prior convict status.
